J. H. CROSS,

Telephone No. 61. Cor. Second and Union Sts.

Jenkins—Great Scott! there comes Jones. Let's turn down this corner. Jorky—Why, do you owe him so much as that? Jenkins—No; but he's just bought a house in Brooklyn and I'm afraid he'll ask me over there to dinner. Judge.

MAKES ITSELF FELT—the great, gripping, old-fashioned pill. Not only when you take it, but unpleasant, from first to last, and it only does a little temporary good.

The things to take its place are Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. One of these at a dose will regulate the whole system perfectly. They're tiny, sugar-coated granules, scarcely larger than mustard seeds. They act in Nature's own way. No reaction afterward. Their help lasts and they do permanent good. Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, Sick or Bilious Headaches, and all derangements of the liver, stomach, and bowels are prevented, relieved, and cured.

They're the cheapest, for they're guaranteed to give satisfaction or money is returned. Nothing can be "just as good."

Bright boy—The paper says there's a doctor in the city who makes long noses shorter, big ears smaller, and I don't know what all. Father—Well? Bright boy—I guess you'd better send me to him and have my legs shortened, if you can't afford to buy me a larger bicycle.—Good News.

La Grippe.
 During the prevalence of the gripe the past seasons it was a noticeable fact that those who depended upon Dr. King's New Discovery, not only had a speedy recovery, but escaped all of the troublesome after effects of the malady. This remedy seems to have a peculiar power in effecting rapid cures not only in cases of la grippe, but in all diseases of throat, chest and lungs, and has cured cases of asthma and hay fever of long standing. Try it and be convinced. It won't disappoint. Free trial bottles at Snipes & Kinerly's drug store.

Mr. Watts—It seems queer that elephants should be so afraid of mice. Mrs. Watts—I don't see anything queer in it at all. The elephant is one of the most intelligent of quadrupeds.—Cincinnati Tribune

W. A. McGuire, a well known citizen of McKay, Ohio, is of the opinion that there is nothing as good as children troubled with colds or croup as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He has used it in his family for several years with the best results and always kept a bottle of it in the house. After having la grippe he was himself troubled with a severe cough. He used other remedies without benefit and then concluded to try the children's medicine and to his delight it soon effected a permanent cure. 50 cent bottles for sale by Blakeley & Houghton Druggists.

LEGEND OF THE PIASA.

A Monster Which Made War on the Tribe of the Illini.

Half Bird, Half Beast, with the Head of an Ox and the Beak of an Eagle—Could Carry a Buffalo in Each of Its Four Talons—Where It Was Killed.

Overlooking the Piasa river, which pours its waters into the Mississippi just above Alton, stands the Piasa rock. About this there clings the remnant of an Indian legend which tells of a brave chief, Wapato, and how he saved his people from a monster. There are people now alive who remember when the rock bore the rude picture of a huge bird which was slain by Wapato, painted there by his people to mark his act of heroism. The story was handed down in unwritten tribal history and the early settlers heard it from the chiefs of the tribe of which Wapato was the foremost chief.

At an early period in the history of this country, says the Chicago Tribune, a tribe of Indians inhabited the territory now embraced in the state of Illinois. They were the Illini, from which the state derived its name. For many years this tribe increased in power, prosperity and numbers until their tepees could be seen on its green prairies and their canoes upon its beautiful water courses from one end of the state to the other. After a time a change came over this happy nation. Their hunting grounds were deserted and their ranks decimated. Where their people were the most numerous and where their great chief had his home there appeared a bird of enormous size—more of a beast than fowl—which took up its abode on a rock overlooking the Mississippi. Its huge body was covered with scales of every hue. With one blow of its mighty tail it could make the earth tremble. It had a head like an ox, with the beak of an eagle. Immense horns hung over eyes that shone with the fierceness of lightning, and its four feet were armed with powerful talons, in each of which it could carry a buffalo. When it flapped its wings there was a noise like thunder, and when it dived into the river great waves rolled upon the shore.

To this animal the Illini gave the name of "Piasa Bird of the Evil Spirit." This bird feasted daily upon the Illini people whom it bore off in its claws. The influence of the medicine men stayed not its power. Day by day they saw with terror their number diminishing to gratify the insatiable appetite of the Piasa. Village after village was destroyed and consternation spread throughout all their tribe. There seemed nothing in the future for them but entire annihilation.

At last Wapato, the brave young chief of the nation, beloved and esteemed as their greatest warrior, whose fame extended beyond the rising and the setting sun, called a council of the priests in a secret cave, where, after many days of prayer and fasting, they slept. Presently the Great Spirit appeared to Wapato and told him the only way to rid his people of their great destroyer was to offer himself as a sacrifice. The young chief started up, aroused the sleeping priests, informed them of his vision from the Great Spirit and of his resolve to make the required sacrifice.

Wapato dressed himself as becoming a great chief—put on his war paint, and with his tomahawk, bow and arrows, took his position on this prominent point of rock to await the coming of the bird of death, the slayer of his people. As had been directed in his vision, many of his brave warriors were concealed in the interstices of the rocks, each to await with arrow drawn the time when their beloved chief should be attacked, to wreak their last vengeance on their dreaded enemy. Erect and powerful stood the undaunted Wapato, calm and placid, chanting his death song. Suddenly there came a roar as of thunder, and in one instant the Piasa, with a wild scream that shook the rocks, darted down upon the chief. The brave Wapato quailed not, but when within reach he buried his tomahawk deep into the monster's head, every arrow went with lightning speed into its body, and the Piasa, with a shriek that resounded far over the opposite shore, fell dead.

Wapato stood unharmed—not an arrow nor even the talons of the bird had touched him. The Great Spirit, in admiration of the noble sacrifice the generous and brave Wapato would have made for his people, held over him an invisible shield. The tribe gave way to the wildest joy, held a great feast in honor of the event, and to commemorate it painted the figure of the bird of the Piasa on the rock, by the side of which their noble chieftain had stood in his heroic defense. There the picture remained for ages—until within the memory of dwellers of Alton—a mark for the arrow or bullet of the red man as he ascended or descended the great "Father of Waters."

Lowered the Piano.

The following amusing anecdote is told of the cantatrice Catalani. She was one day rehearsing at the Paris opera house an air which she had to sing in the evening, when she found the pitch of the pianoforte too high, and gave instructions to have the instrument lowered by the evening. Her husband, Capt. Valabreque, volunteered to see her order carried out, and immediately sent for the stage carpenter and had the legs of the pianoforte amputated. The performance took place, and the lady was greatly annoyed at the continued high pitch at which she had to sing. She soon sought her husband and remonstrated with him for neglecting her wishes. He, not a little hurt at being thus wrongfully accused, insisted upon calling the person who had performed the operation, and to Catalani's utter astonishment, called the carpenter, and said to him: "How much did you lower the piano, Charles?" "Two inches, sir," was the prompt reply.

MODES OF MARRIAGE.

Strange Ceremonies Observed Among Different Nationalities.

To eat maize pudding from the same plate, or to eat in any way together, is a widely distributed marriage ceremony. In Brazil, says the Washington News, a couple may be married by drinking brandy together; in Japan, by so many cups of wine; in Russia and Scandinavia it used to be one cup for both. The joining of hands among the Romans and Hindoos is common to many parts of the world. In Scotland it is called "hand fastening," and couples live together after. To sit together on a seat while receiving friends, or to have the hands of each tied together with grass, or to smear with each others blood, or for the woman to tie a cord of her own twisting around the naked waist of the man, constitutes marriage in one part or another.

In Australia a woman carries fire to her lover's hut, and makes a fire for him. In America she lays a bundle of rods at the door of his tent. A Loango negro cooks two dishes for him in his own hut. In Croatia the bridegroom boxes the bride's ears, and in Russia the father formerly struck his daughter gently with a new whip—for the last time—and then gave the weapon to her husband. Down to the present it is a custom in Hungary for the groom to give the bride a kick after the marriage ceremony, to make her feel her subjection. Even with all civilized people the servitude of the bride is clearly indicated.

AFoot IN THE HARTZ.

Stories That Cluster Around the Historic Hill, the Burgberg.

Interest in Hartzburg centers not in the town, but in a conical hill which rises just behind it, the Burgberg. This is a spot with a history—the one-time site of a heathen altar, afterward the seat of empire and now a picnic ground and beer garden. On this height, now overgrown with trees, says Outing, the unfortunate Henry IV. built him a castle and cathedral, and from this spot he started on that journey whose first stage was Canossa, and last a pauper's grave in a land of strangers. Here Henry the Lion dwelt while subject to Barbarossa, and within its walls died the last emperor of the Saxon line. Now there is a little hotel on the summit, round about chairs and tables for tired and thirsty mortals, while over near a bit of the old castle wall, which, by the way, looks suspiciously restored, is a shop stuffed with Phillistine knick-knacks and mementos. On the brow of the hill stands a granite monument, whereby hangs a tale. Some admirers of Bismarck erected it here in his honor in 1877, put a medallion portrait of the great chancellor on its one side and on its other chiseled his boastful saying, made during a debate on the Catholic question: "We'll not go to Canossa." This monument—an insult in stone—was erected just eight hundred years after the unfortunate kaiser went there and begged the pardon of the pope. Little did its builders think that the boastful man of iron would within a decade get far toward Canossa himself.

NEGROES OF CURACOA.

How They Risked Their Lives Against Great Odds to Be Free.

An anecdote about these Curacao negroes is well worth interpolating, so illustrative is it of that love of liberty admired by all Americans, says the New York World. During the 40's the republic of Venezuela abolished slavery and enacted that whoever stepped on Venezuelan soil by that act became free. The negroes of the neighboring Dutch island heard of this and they also learned the scientific fact that during a certain period of the year the gulf stream makes a curious sharp curve around the island and carries with fierce current towards the mainland.

Unable to make or steal boats, many of these negroes, although usually well treated on the plantations, used to cut down trees, lop off the superfluous limbs, and lashing themselves to these trunks on dark nights when the wind was blowing strongly with the current, these daring navigators would trust themselves to the tempest and the ocean in the hope of being cast on the land of the free. Many perished. Some succeeded. Such was the type of colored men who invented the cordial curacao.

WOMAN'S TRUE KINDLINESS.

It Is More Natural with Her Than with Man.

Among all nations, women are ever inclined to be cheerful and modest. They do not hesitate, like man, to perform a hospitable or generous action; not haughty, nor arrogant, nor supercilious, but full of courtesy and affection; industrious, economical, ingenious; more virtuous, and performing more good actions than man. I never addressed myself in the language of decency and friendship to a woman, whether civilized or savage, without receiving a decent and friendly answer.

In wandering over the barren plains of inhospitable Denmark, through honest Sweden, frozen Lapland, rude and churlish Finland, unprincipled Russia and the widespread regions of the wandering Tartar, if hungry, dry, cold, wet, or sick, woman has ever been friendly to me, and uniformly so; and, to add to this virtue, so worthy the appellation of benevolence, these actions have been performed in so free and kind a manner that, if I was dry, I drank the sweet draught, and if hungry, ate the coarse morsel with a double relish.

An Odd Bird's Nest.

The oddest of all birds' nests is the one built by the tomtobans, a South African songster. It is built of cotton, and always upon the tree producing the material. In constructing the domicile the female works inside and the male outside, where he builds a sentinel box for his own special use. He sits in the box and keeps watch or sings nearly all the time, and when danger comes in the form of a hawk or a snake he warns the family, but never enters the main nest.
